

Teachers of Critical Languages Program

Teach Mandarin in the United States

The Teachers of Critical Languages Program brings teachers of English or Mandarin as a Foreign Language to the U.S. for one year to teach Mandarin to American primary and secondary school students and serve as cultural resources for their host schools and communities.

PROGRAM BENEFITS

- Experience American culture and society while sharing Mandarin language and culture;
- Learn about U.S. teaching methodologies and improve English language skills through professional development workshops;
- J-1 visa support;
- A pre-departure orientation in Taiwan;
- Round-trip travel from Taiwan to and within the U.S.;
- A nine-day welcome orientation in Washington, DC;
- An approximate 10.5-month teaching assignment in a U.S. school;
- Accident and sickness health benefits plan during the program;
- Living stipend of approximately $20,000 for the duration of the 10.5-month teaching assignment; and
- Monthly housing allowance (based on U.S. host community rates) and assistance finding housing.
- Selected teachers can bring family members at their own expense.
